Fushimi Inari was dedicated to the gods of agriculture, the deities were enrolled to ensure prosperity in business, a bountiful harvest and traffic safety. The Fox is traditionally seen as sacred, and is considered the messenger of Inari. According to Folklore, it has been said that in the olden days the Fox ate the insects that would harm the crops, which then led to a bountiful harvest.

One of 3 biggest festivals in Japan, the 'Gion festival' is held by Yasaka Shrine and is Gion-san by locals. 14:10 - 15:20 Kiyomizu-dera Temple

The proverb "to jump off the stage at Kiyomizu" that is the Japanese equivalent of the English expression "to take the plunge", is derived from Kiyomizu-dera. The Main Hall has a large wooden stage that juts out over the hillside, it was built without using a single nail and is supported by 139 pillars. The view of the city of Kyoto from this Kiyomizu Stage is magnificent. Kiyomizu-dera (the temple of clear water) was named after Otowa Waterfall which is said to be good for your longevity, health, and study if you drink. This temple is famous for the cherry blossoms in spring and fall foliage in autumn.

16:00 - 16:45 Kinkaku-ji Temple

Kinkaku, a pagoda made to house the sacred relics of the Buddha, has given this temple the popular name of Kinkaku-ji (Temple of the Golden Pavilion). But the official name of this branch temple of the Rinzaï sect Zen temple of Shôkoku-ji is Rokuon-ji. This complex, whose gardens and architecture focused around a central Golden Pavilion, was said to evoke paradise on earth. And the view of Kinkaku which is reflected in the Kyôkochi (Mirror Pond) is very beautiful. This was built by the third Ashikaga Shô gun Yoshimitsu for his own villa but turned into a temple after his death. This temple was rebuilt in 1955.
